

Erin Stumo – High School Assistant Principal of the Year
Syracuse High School – Davis School District

Erin Stumo started her career in education as a high school English teacher in Austin, MN in 2007. In addition to teaching English, she enjoyed working with students outside of the classroom by coaching girls' ice hockey, adapted floor hockey, and serving as the student government advisor. Along with teaching in a traditional classroom, Erin was privileged to teach in innovative learning environments such as a Ninth Grade Academy and a Project- Based Learning school within a school. These experiences have given her a unique perspective regarding instruction, and she is always happy to collaborate with teams to implement new ideas and strategies to help engage students.

The Stumo family moved to Utah almost 10 years ago to support Erin's husband's career. Erin was eager to learn about education and leadership in a new state and has found the best professional home in the Davis School District. Her career in Utah has included wonderful opportunities for teaching, instructional coaching, and working as an administrator. Erin loved serving her community by first working as an assistant principal at Syracuse Junior High and, most recently, Syracuse High School. In this community, she has gained invaluable experience working with incredible teachers, students, and administrators. Erin believes that every student can be successful, and her goal for students is that they leave high school with a broad range of opportunities for their futures. In addition to supporting her students at their various extracurricular functions, Erin spends her time exploring this beautiful state with her husband, her hilarious 9-year-old twins, and their rambunctious goldendoodle, Rosie, and honing her newly acquired sourdough-bread-making skills.
